to Scotch Plains, but asked for a subscription because "...if I just change the names, tt'd be..."

In 1955 Bill was confined to the Rahway General Hospital, where he had been exposed to the wealth of scholarships offered promising students in that locale, but discovered that there were few in the Scotch Plains-Fanwood school system. He determined that a boy who showed promise scholastically, socially and had a financial need should be offered the helping hand the Garbes are so prone to extend. Thus the William Garbe Foundation Scholarship was born, providing wholeheartedly, but lilely of the discrimination against the fairer sex. Myrtle found the way she would share her card sales profit with the Hospital. She established a like scholarship for girls graduating from the Scotch Plains-Fanwood High School. Today, fifteen young men and five young women have walked forth from their college campuses determined to emulate the affection, trust and generosity the Garbes have shown them.

Other honors have been bestowed on them; a testimonial dinner given by the American Legion, they have been selected for the Scotch Plainsman; their annual Christmas luncheon with all their scholarship recipients; but none will be more fondly remembered then the B'nai Brith Citizenship and Civic Affairs Award they will receive Saturday.

YMCA Report

Total Membership Value $1570

The Fanwood-Scotch Plains YMCA Tuesday night held its yearly report night for its second annual sustaining membership enrollment campaign. William G. Franklin, co-chairman of the enrollment announced that 29 sustaining members, including 10 century club members, had been enrolled with a total membership value of $1570.

The goal of the membership enrolment is to secure 250 new and renewed sustaining memberships to ensure the support necessary to meet the demands of the continually increasing number of young people taking part in "Y" activities. The number of sustaining members has increased 50% during the past 11 months.

T. F. Franchenke, president of the board of directors of the YMCA, stated, at last Tuesday's meeting, "I am pleased with the excellent results of the first five days of the enrollment." The campaign began April 24th, which commenced May 5 will continue to June 6. The next report night will be May 17 at 8 p.m. in the YMCA.
