It's all in tradition of the Super Bowl!

According to American Association of Alcoholic Advertising Administrators and Accounting Agencies (better known as the AAAAAA), Super Bowl Sunday has replaced New Year's Eve as the most extensive and largest party-giving time in the United States.

In a recent survey, the Super Bowl party has now surpassed in importance the game itself. Interviews at the ShopRite supermarket at the Blue Star Shopping Center went something along these lines.

Q. Are you going to a Super Bowl Party? A. I'm giving one. That's why I'm here. Q. Do you know the point spread between Washington and Buffalo? A. Is that who's playing? What happened to the Giants? Q. Do you know what Super Bowl this is? A. No, I was never very good with Roman
